Shawn,

The S.O.P.'s generated by MCM are proprietary company generated manuals with internally developed procedures for our own personnel use and cannot be released without a full indemnity by the Navy. Seaward had months to develop their own manuals. Please understand that maintenance logs, engine hour logs etc, are records and not internally developed company manuals or procedures.

Marty,

Understand, But the SOP's and EOSS's are supposed to be on the craft during normal operations. So If the craft came down with none of these and they were written to safely operate each vessel, I believe they belong to the navy. If the craft came down with none of the maintenance logs, engine hour logs and you are willing to give these up and you had to develop these, then why not SOP's & EOSS which are essential for the day to day operation of the craft.

V/r,
Shawn

Marty,

I would like to have copies of the EOCC/ SOP's for the YTB's, YFB's and LCU.

Thanks,
